My Development Story

Christopher P. Chiodo, MD
Boston, Massachusetts

Product development has several important components and stages. From the original conception of an idea to its ultimate commercialization, intellectual property must be appropriately protected. At the same time, it must be refined, shared, and marketed. This presentation will give personal perspective on this process and highlight salient milestones as well as pearls and pitfalls.